Message from the Vice Chancellor

Professor Dr. Allan Fisher

Many thanks for your continued efforts as we head toward the successful completion of 2013. I'll draw your attention to three items in particular in this issue.

First is the INTI group poster that you have begun to see around campus. I hope the ideas are both familiar and inspiring to you, as they continue to be to me. We'll have more conversations about them in the new year, as we work to make them more and more real. We will also work on incorporating them into INTI IU's official vision and mission as reflected in our curriculum documents.

Second is the invitation to nominate academic staff for the IU Teaching Excellence Awards. This is a great opportunity to recognize some of our most dedicated and effective academics. We will present awards to the honorees early in the new year.

Third is the invitation to nominate staff and teams for the STARS award. As part of our overall effort to live our values, these new awards give us the opportunity to honor those who exhibit them most fully, regardless of their role or status.

I hope you'll consider nominating deserving awardees. I also hope you'll take the opportunity over the upcoming semester break to take some well-deserved rest, and return recharged in January. Best wishes for the New Year.

INTI IU Student Participates in World Business Forum

In the month of October, Jasmine Chin, a final year Mass Communication student, was among the three students who were chosen to represent INTI IU as a student anchor at the World Business Forum in New York.

According to Jasmine, being a student anchor in a celebrated event such as the World Business Forum has shown her that life is full of opportunities and uncertainties which lead to self-improvement. This opportunity had also enabled her to discover more about the world and herself through international exposure and individual development.
