How the cover gets made

"The story's on Deutsche Bank. They're wrapped up in a scandal involving an attempt to hide hundreds of millions of euros in losses at an Italian bank."

"Do you mean to tell me that a bank may have acted deceptively and that corruption may even have been at an institutional level?"

"Yes."

"A bank? The type of company that, since the founding of the very first bank, has always behaved with honesty and wisdom, and with the best interests of the public in mind? A bank, that shining beacon of light in a dark world full of nastiness and cruelty?"

"Are you done?"

"Yes."
