

Riu Xin can lead a normal life now

LIVE-SAVING CONTRIBUTION ... The generosity of Malaysians has yet again given another baby the chance to lead a normal life.

One-year-old Wong Riu Xin who underwent corrective heart surgery on July 31, was a joy to look at yesterday when met with her parents, Wong Soon Leong and Len Kam Mooi, at the Gleneagles Intan Medical Centre.

The sleepless nights spent in the hospital are finally over and they can now look forward to leading a regular life.

The much-relieved parents said this would not have been possible without the donations and support from the New Straits Times and the Lions Club of KL Seputeh.

NST readers and the club contributed RM30,000 for the operation.

In a simple ceremony at the medical centre, the club's immediate past president, Michael Low (third from left), handed over a cheque for RM10,000 to the parents.

Low said the amount was mainly raised through the Leo Club of Inti College Malaysia and the Yik Sang Amateur Singing Society which held fund-raising dinners.
