

Dr Gan is INTI's new associate vice-president

INTI College has appointed Dr Gan Slowck Lee as its new associate vice-president for Academics.

Gan (right) is the former director of Studies at KDU College.

A long-time columnist and writer for major English dailies in Malaysia, Gan is certainly no stranger to the education arena.

Holding an education doctoral degree in curriculum and instruction from the University of Hawaii, her teaching and research in the last 13 years have focused on IT applications in education and distance learning.

She has published widely, both locally and internationally. Her latest book is entitled IT and Education in Malaysia: Problems, Issues and Challenges.

Prior to her move into the private education sector, Gan was an associate professor at Universiti Putra Malaysia.

Gan's appointment at INTI College Malaysia is a timely move given that the college is aggressively developing into an electronic campus.

INTI College had earlier announced an investment allocation of RM20 million to upgrade its information and communications technology infrastructure, including the installation of wireless technologies over the next five years.

At INTI College Malaysia, Gan is expected to further consolidate efforts of the college in moving towards the goals of an e-campus, that is to use e-learning to enhance and supplement learning on campus, as well as for distance learning at INTI branch campuses in Malaysia and abroad.

Gan will also continue to contribute to research and development in her role as external supervisor and examiner for graduate students working on IT and education projects in public and private universities.
