

I'm 20. And I Have Over 150 Kids.

I've been working with refugee children, since I was 17. The NGO that I co-founded with my best friend – Refuge For The Refugees – adopts, equips and staffs schools for these kids.

It does make a difference to their lives that they can read and write, and apply their knowledge. Who knows what great things they could do in the future? People often tell me that what I want for my kids is impossible. But I have since learned to rise above challenges.

To me, education is more than getting the right papers for a job. It's also about being exposed to the world. And everywhere, there are lessons to be learned.

I've learned from situations how to adapt and find opportunities. I've learned from other people how to connect and work together. I've learned from my kids how to stay optimistic. I've learned to create my own solutions when none can be found.

Education is more than being book smart.
